

Abstract

A method for enabling a data processing system with a host running under an operating system and with a disk array storage device organized by logical devices to processes plural I/O requests from one or more host processors concurrently.